FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Rodney Muterspaw, retired Police Chief, releases 30 years of uncut personal journals in new book, The Blue View.

Middletown, Ohio, December 14, 2020 – Rodney Muterspaw, a 30-year veteran of the City of Middletown Police Department in Middletown, Ohio announced today he is releasing a self-published book, The Blue View. Not a novel and not a memoir, The Blue View is unlike anything ever published before. Never meant to be released to the public, The Blue View contains the raw and uncut personal journals kept by Muterspaw from his early days in the police academy through his last day as the Chief of Police. Middletown, Ohio is the backdrop for the New York Times Best Seller, Hillbilly Elegy, and Muterspaw took over as Chief of Police when the city's opioid problems were at their highest. Reading the book will give you a look into what most police officers never share – their real emotions.

Hillbilly Elegy author, JD Vance, says The Blue View is “Well written, timely, and engaging, this is one of those rare books that will teach you something even as it keeps you entertained.”

Stephen Robert Morse, Emmy nominated Producer of Netflix's Amanda Knox says the book is “a view of policing that is unlike anything I've read before.”

Van Gordon Sauter, Former President of CBS News calls Muterspaw a “discerning, compassionate man” and “good writer.”

Pre-orders are available now on Amazon.com with a release date currently set for December 30, 2020. The Blue View will be available on release in paperback, audio-book, and Kindle.

Excerpts from the book along with more information can be found at theblueviewbook.com.
